The most feared woman killer in Australia is to walk free after 25 years behind bars - but even prison guards are worried by what she will do next: 'More dangerous than Ivan Milat'

Rebecca Jane Butterfield was classed as more dangerous than notorious Australian serial killer Ivan Milat during her quarter-century in jail, but now she's set to walk free.

The savage killer was designated 'Extreme High Security by Commissioner' and her prison file was ominously marked: 'Extreme caution at all times.'

The police officer's daughter was initially jailed for stabbing a neighbour but her cold-blooded manslaughter of a friend and inmate in a prison yard sealed her fate forever.

Butterfield, 50, would also unleash her ferocious anger on staff and other prisoners apparently at random and without warning, leaving several scarred for life.

Prison guards were warned she could even remove her handcuffs - and would not hesitate to launch brutal assaults or make chilling threats against prison staff.

But now she's set to be released back into the community, long after the end of her sentence, amid a series of disturbing warnings from those who now know her best.

'She will without a doubt kill again,' said one female prison guard on a Facebook discussion among officers who have encountered the killer.

'I've looked directly into those eyes... she is without feeling nor remorse.'
Even just exiting her cell, Butterfield had to wear handcuffs attached to a restraining belt. She has repeatedly told officers and medical staff that she will kill once more.

'Absolutely she will kill again if she's released,' one officer said.

'Having had a lot of involvement with Rebecca, it's not even a doubt that it would happen, it's a certainty.'

Another said: 'She will kill or maim.'

'If not a police officer or other first responder, she will do something to a NDIS carer ... a housemate, an innocent person in the street, at a shop, or just walking around one night.'

'All she needs is a knife.'

Butterfield can fashion even a small piece of plastic into a fearsome weapon, slashing one officer's face with a prison-made 'shiv', a makeshift jail knife.

Despite the dark warnings, the NSW Supreme Court has ordered the killer is made ready for integration back into the outside world, probably within a few months.

The 'high risk violent offender' is currently in custody as a forensic patient at Long Bay prison's mental health hospital, but the court has now ordered an end to her staying there.

Admittedly, Butterfield is as much a danger to herself as others. She cut her own throat four years in a row, almost bleeding out once, and severely burnt herself when she set fire to her cell in 2008.

The following year she headbutted her cell wall 105 times, fracturing her skull so badly that officers could see her brain pulsing through the crack.

Weeks later, transferred from prison to Long Bay Hospital, she reopened the wound by banging her head against the wall - and then inserted items into her scalp.

The plan now is for Butterfield to live in an NDIS-funded home where she will be allowed out to shop and mix with the local community.

She was the daughter of a country cop, Senior Constable Ray 'Dudley' Butterfield, then a 23-year NSW Police veteran.

Butterfield had allegedly been raped by one or more men, but the main man accused had his sexual assault charges dismissed at court after it was claimed 'police in charge of the case stuffed up the brief of evidence'.

In the aftermath, a furious Butterfield went to Orange Police Station and pelted it with rocks. (CONT)

Earlier today, the first contingent of NSW firefighters from the #RFS and NPWS returned home following a multi-day deployment to Victoria. Our crews operated in extreme and challenging fire conditions, undertaking property protection around the township of Yarck and working to strengthen containment lines on the Longwood Fire.

We thank these firefighters for their outstanding efforts and welcome them home for some well-deserved rest after a demanding deployment. With significant fires continuing to burn across Victoria, additional #RFS crews are being deployed to support local firefighters and assist communities affected by ongoing fire activity.

This evening, the brigade attended a vehicle rollover outside the St Ives Showground.

The driver was lucky and was able to remove themselves from the vehicle.

With a bit of rain around after a long dry period, roads can be particularly slippery. Please take it easy and drive to the conditions.

12 January, Shared with permission from the Mt Kuring-gai Community Group yesterday (Monday):

Just wanted to check if anyone saw a person in black pants and army shirt tonight about 9pm near or around Church St, as we had a car stolen. My partner was held up by knife point.

Or if people have cameras can you please check footage? We are near the train station walkway. Not sure the way this person came. They acted alone. And updates:

Thanks everyone. Looking at dashcam, looks like they came across road. Took our house keys. Now waiting for locksmith to come change locks.

Thanks everyone. The car has been recovered in Castle Hill. Probably needs new bumper, but glad we are safe, and piece of mind locks changed.

12 January, from Neighbourhood Watch Ku-ring-gai & Hornsby

Tonight Neighbourhood Watch Ku-ring-gai & Hornsby Volunteers held a small community meeting in Neighbourhood Watch - Wahroonga to discuss crime prevention, reporting and other safety and security issues.

The literature, and all the important messages will be shared with the 26 residents in the cul-de-sac.

- Work with the existing WhatsApp group to get alerts in the quickest and most efficient manner.
- Buddy up with residents who aren't part of the WhatsApp group, such as the vulnerable or socially isolated.
- Agree a sign with your buddy partner, eg opening the curtains before 9am means "I'm OK".
- Educate yourselves by looking at WatchOut.org.au and doing further research: <https://watchout.org.au/>
- Find a smooth clean surface and utilise the NHW garbage bin stickers (see our website: <https://au-nhwkuringgaihornsby.org/garbage/>)

12 January, from 10 News Sydney

The hero of the Bondi Junction shopping centre mass stabbing, Inspector Amy Scott (right), has tragically been diagnosed with a rare and aggressive form of breast cancer.

New South Wales Police Legacy shared the tragic news online stating, “And just as she is so much more than her diagnosis, she is so much more than ‘the hero of Bondi Junction’.”

“She is a loving wife, mother of two young boys, devoted to serving the community through her work as a NSW Police Officer, and widely known as selfless, compassionate, and kind,” NSW Police Legacy said.

Inspector Scott acted alone, confronting armed attacker Joel Cauchi inside the crowded Westfield in Sydney after he had already killed six people and injured 12 others on April 13, 2024.

Amy's colleagues have created a fundraiser to help with the financial burdens that will now be placed upon the family.

12 January, Shared with permission from the Wahroonga Community Group:

Jan 7 - sad post incoming

This afternoon on the highway at about 5:20 I was in fairly fast moving traffic travelling City bound on the most right hand lane

I saw what I believe to be a small black cat lying, deceased, on the road. It was close to the concrete divider

I was a bit shocked and can't remember the exact location, but it's somewhere between the big M1 intersection and, say, Woomona Ave. The traffic was moving too quickly for me to find a way to turn back and see exactly where it was.

I'm just putting this out there in case someone is looking for a missing black cat.

11 January, from Hornsby/Ku-ring-gai Rural Fire Service: Bush Fire - Chase Rd Mt Kuring-gai near Bobbin Head.

Today smoke was spotted by Berowra and Galston fire towers and by Brigades, and a response was initiated. The Duty Officer immediately directed a heavy weight of attack with several RFS fire tankers, aviation support activated, and NPWS crews attending from Bobbin Head.

The crews encountered an area of bush alight under high voltage power lines and got to work. With it being very hot and windy this fire posed a risk of running into KRG Chase NP, to Bobbin Head, and across the creek to Duffys Forest...

...which is the exact scenario our firefighters and incident managers have trained for in drills and exercises.

With this potential the public alert level was moved to Watch & Act.

Fire under power lines has the potential to cause arcs and widespread blackouts - with half of Sydney running their AC today this would be a disaster. Due to outstanding work from fire crews, and despite spotting some hundreds of metres, the fire was contained within a couple of hours.

Mop up continued through the searing afternoon heat - hard work in the thick bush. Crews continue to patrol this evening until the forecast southerly change reduces the fire danger rating.

Thank you to all volunteer and salaried crews today, both at the fire and those in support roles. This was an excellent example of a fast aggressive offensive attack containing a fire that had potential, to under 5ha.

10 January, from Hannah's Blue Butterflies Road Safety Awareness Inc: WHAT DO I DO IF MY SEATBELT IS FRAYED?

You must immediately stop using the seatbelt and replace it, as fraying compromises its strength and makes it unsafe in a crash.

Do not attempt to repair it by sewing or gluing, as this is not a safe or legal fix and can increase the risk of injury.

You should replace the frayed belt with a new one as soon as possible to ensure both safety and legality.

Why frayed seatbelts are dangerous-

Compromised strength: Fraying and tearing weaken the seatbelt's tensile strength, making it more likely to break during an accident.

Lack of protection: A compromised seatbelt will not effectively restrain you in a collision, significantly increasing the risk of serious injury or death.

Legal issues: Driving with a damaged seatbelt is unsafe and may be illegal, potentially resulting in fines or a failed safety inspection.

How to replace a frayed seatbelt-

Professional replacement: The safest option is to have a professional mechanic replace the seatbelt.

Webbing replacement service: Some companies offer a service to replace the webbing on your existing seatbelt, allowing you to keep the hardware.

09 January, Shared with permission from the Lindfield/East Lindfield/Killara/Roseville Community Group:

With the recent posts about women being followed and feeling unsafe around Roseville train station, I wanted to help create a safe option within our local community and ask that this be shared.

Our office, Dolman Bateman is on 21 hill st (next to cafe Nate) , is locked at all times and open from 7am to 5pm, and often later most evenings. If you or your daughters ever feel unsafe, please tell them to come straight to our office and ring the bell. Someone will let them in, and they are welcome to stay until they feel safe or until a parent can pick them up.

As a community, we should look out for one another. We are here to help.

We are aware that there is a man who frequently lingers in the area and aware of what he looks like, so please remain vigilant and remind your children to always go to a safe place if they feel uncomfortable.

Please spread the word so everyone knows there is a safe space available.

09 January, from Hannah's Blue Butterflies Road Safety Awareness Inc: WHAT PRESCRIPTION MEDICATIONS SHOULDN'T I TAKE IF I DRIVE? 💊

Medications that can advise against driving include those that cause drowsiness, affect vision, or impair concentration, such as some cold and allergy medicines, sleeping pills, anti-anxiety drugs, and opioids. Other examples include certain antidepressants, antipsychotics, epilepsy medicines, and medicinal cannabis.

Always consult your doctor or pharmacist to see if your specific medication affects your ability to drive safely and read the warning labels on all over-the-counter products.

Examples of medications

Painkillers: Opioids like codeine and oxycodone can slow your reaction time.

Cold and allergy medicines: Products with sedating antihistamines can cause drowsiness.

Sleeping pills and anti-anxiety medication: Benzodiazepines and other sedatives can impair driving ability.

Antidepressants and antipsychotics: Some of these medications can have a sedating effect.

Epilepsy medication: Some drugs for epilepsy can affect alertness.

Medicinal cannabis: It is illegal to drive with any THC in your system, and CBD can also cause impairment.

What to do-

Ask your doctor or pharmacist: They can advise you on the specific risks of your medication and potential interactions with other drugs or alcohol.

Read the label: Check for warnings on over-the-counter products and follow any instructions carefully.

Monitor your symptoms: If you experience side effects like drowsiness, blurred vision, dizziness, or aggression, do not drive.

Be cautious with new medication: Your driving may be most affected during the first few weeks of a new medication.

UPDATED TO REMOVE PHOTO. Description added: White, aged 35-45, big build, dark hair.

A girlfriend of mine had a frightening experience yesterday where she felt unsafe after being followed by a man. He hid behind a tree, which caused her to fear for her safety and she had to run home.

Today she noticed the same individual at Roseville Bakery, appearing to linger in the area, which raised further concern as he may be local.

This matter will be reported to police so they can assess and handle it appropriately, especially given the nearby schools and families in the area. I'm sharing this purely to encourage awareness and vigilance. Please have calm conversations with your children about staying alert and trusting their instincts.

I respectfully ask that there be no negative or inflammatory comments the intention here is safety, not speculation.

The offender took off in a BLUE Suzuki Swift (perhaps a 2006/7 model) which was parked near the tennis courts and was chased by car down Galston Rd, before turning left into Sutton St, onto Link Rd and then turned left in Old Berowra Rd before losing sight of the car. 5 mins later the car was then seen speedy up OBR towards Peats Ridge Rd (old Pacific Hwy).

Police have been reported and patrolled the area with no luck, however the same car was involved in similar event in Thornleigh on 28/12/25.

Hi everyone, I'm hoping someone can help.

On 18 December at around 6 - 6.30pm, my partner was on his motorbike on Pacific Hwy, near Yardley Avenue, when he was hit from behind while taking off at the traffic lights.

He was taken to hospital and has a broken collarbone and four broken ribs. The police are investigating, and we're also trying to gather information for insurance.

If you saw anything, stopped to help, or have dashcam footage, we'd really appreciate hearing from you. Even small details can make a difference.

08 January, from Neighbourhood Watch Australasia

Exercising outdoors is great for your physical and mental health — and with a few simple precautions, it can also be safe and stress-free.

Before you head out, consider these tips:

- Vary your routine. Try not to run or walk the same route at the same time every day. Predictable patterns can make you easier to target.
- Choose visible routes. Stick to well-lit paths, popular trails, and areas with regular foot traffic, especially early in the morning or after dark.
- Let someone know your plans. Tell a friend or family member where you're going and when you expect to be back — or share your live location if you can.
- Stay alert. Keep the volume low if you're listening to music so you can hear what's happening around you. Awareness is key.
- Carry essentials securely. Take your phone, keys, and ID, and keep them in a secure pocket or armband.
- Trust your instincts. If something feels off — a person, place, or situation — change direction, move to a safer area, or seek help.

Staying active shouldn't mean compromising your safety. A little planning goes a long way toward preventing crime and keeping you confident while you move. A personal safety tip from your friends at Neighbourhood Watch Australasia.

08 January, from Hannah's Blue Butterflies Road Safety Awareness Inc: IS IT ILLEGAL FOR PASSENGERS TO DRINK ALCOHOL IN A VEHICLE? ^[OBJ]

It is legal for passengers to drink in a car in some Australian states (like NSW, VIC, SA).

Yet it is illegal in other states (TAS, ACT, WA, QLD).

Vehicles on roads are considered ^[OBJ]public places, meaning no open alcohol for anyone, even passengers or when parked, with strict rules or blanket bans.

Laws vary significantly, so passengers can drink freely in some areas but risk fines for an open container in states with stricter rules.

States/Territories Where Passengers CAN Drink (with caveats)

New South Wales (NSW): Passengers can drink, but the driver can't drink at all (even in a stationary car) and must stay under the limit if supervising a learner driver.

Victoria (VIC): Similar to NSW, drivers can't drink at all, but passengers generally can, though it's best to check local council rules.

South Australia (SA): Passengers can drink alcohol; it's the most lenient state, with no open container policy, but unsafe driving with alcohol (even as a passenger) can still lead to fines.

States/Territories Where Passengers CANNOT Drink (Strict)-

Tasmania (TAS): No alcohol consumption allowed in a vehicle by anyone (driver or passenger), even if stationary, according to the Road Safety Act.

Australian Capital Territory (ACT): Drinking is an offense for both drivers and passengers, even when supervising a learner, with heavy penalties.

Western Australia (WA): It's an offense to consume liquor in a private vehicle on a public road, even if parked; cars are considered public spaces.

Queensland (QLD): Passengers can be fined for consuming liquor in a vehicle as it's deemed a public place, with similar rules for supervising learners.

It is a visible to check your specific state/territory laws before allowing passengers to drink, as WA, TAS, ACT, and QLD have bans or significant restrictions, while NSW, VIC, and SA are more lenient for passengers.

07 January, from Neighbourhood Watch Australasia: Helping Others Safely 🍌

Looking out for others is a big part of building safer, more connected communities — but it's just as important to protect your own safety while doing so.

If you see someone who appears to need help, consider these tips:

- Assess the situation first. Take a moment to observe from a distance. Trust your instincts if something doesn't feel right.
 - Keep a safe distance. You can offer help without getting too close or putting yourself in a vulnerable position.
 - Use your voice, not just your presence. Asking "Are you okay?" from a safe distance can be enough to check in or deter inappropriate behaviour.
 - Bring in support. If the situation feels uncertain, involve others nearby, contact security, or call emergency services rather than handling it alone.

- Know when to step back. Helping doesn't mean placing yourself at risk. It's okay to prioritise your own safety.

Being community-minded means looking after each other — and that includes knowing safe ways to offer assistance.

A personal safety message from Neighbourhood Watch Australasia.

IF I HAVE A LICENCE TO DRIVE AN AUTOMATIC VEHICLE CAN I ALSO DRIVE A MANUAL?

No, with an automatic-only license, you are not permitted to drive a manual vehicle on your own.

Driving a manual car is only legal if you are supervised by a fully licensed driver, or if you pass a manual driving test to have the restriction removed from your license.

State-by-state variations

ACT, NSW, Northern Territory: If you are on a provisional license, you can drive a manual vehicle with a supervisor. To drive it solo, you must pass a manual driving test or have held your provisional license for 12 months to have the condition removed.

Queensland, Western Australia: You must pass a manual driving test to have the automatic restriction removed from your license, regardless of your license type.

South Australia: There is no automatic-only restriction, so you can drive a manual vehicle even if you passed your test in an automatic.

Tasmania, Victoria: You can drive manual vehicles after holding your license for a specific period without a manual restriction, or after passing a manual driving test.

Consequences of driving a manual with an automatic license-

Penalties: You can face fines, demerit points, and other penalties.

Insurance issues: You could have an insurance claim denied if you are in an accident while driving a vehicle you are not licensed to drive.

07 January, from Northern Beaches Police Area Command

Failing to exchange details after a crash is an offence
$349 fine and three demerit points

More often than not these days, if you don't stop and provide your details there will be CCTV or a witness will report it to police who then will come knocking, fine book in hand

Police and community working together

Whether it's a nudge in a car park or a scrape on a street, all drivers must stop and their details exchanged.

This means:

- full name & address
- vehicle registration
- full name & address of the vehicle owner if that's not the driver

New Year Office Chitchat

How was your Christmas? you ask

and I think of the bloodstained rug

and the silent scraping of the spade

*in the garden
at midnight*

and the wash wash washing of my hands

and the dreams, those endless dreams

which haunt the night-time

and smudge their thumbprints

on the day to come *and I reply

Super, thanks. Yours?*
